Robert Kostelka, assistant district attorney, pointed out that it would take a legislative act to abolish a fire district, but he explained, "In effect, you consolidated the Ward 1 district.'

"It was not the intention to consolidate the districts," added Ward 5's Leslie Hamm.

But president T. W. Humphries said he thought the jurors should first reach a decision on temporary fire protection before becoming involved with the technicalities of the districts. 'What are we going to do with the fire truck sitting outside?," asked Humphries. Ward 8's J. H. Brown said,

"It looks to me like we ought to untangle what we've got tangled up before we tangle up Recognition anymore.

Freeman, in explaining industry's offer, advised Police Jury that Howard was "hurt" by statements made during Tuesday night's discussion of fire protection in re gards to the Monroe depart-

Sen. Ellender Against Cotton, Feed Programs WASHINGTON (Special)

Sen. Allen J. Ellender of Louisiana renewed his opposition Friday to the current cotton and feed grains programs. In his first farm statement since the 89th Congress convened, Ellender — the chair-man of the Senate Agriculture Committee - said the cotton program will cost about $800 million this year "but does nothing to solve the long run problems of cotton."

Ellender opposed the present program when it was enacted last year. It uses a system of direct payments to the cotton trade and to producers to cut the price of domestic cotton to the lower world price for Amer-

Poor Old 'Uncle Sucker'

The United States has become such a "sucker" in its United Nations policies and actions that responsible commentators have started substituting the words "Uncle Sucker" for Uncle Sam. And well they might. As far as we can recall, nothing in the history of any nation of the world has ever seen such a display of a nation's making itself a "fall guy."

A recent cartoon shows one picture of Uncle Sam in which he is contributing 40 per cent of all the expenses of conducting the United Nations. A lower picture shows him with less than one per cent of the total vote. This is an outrage of the first water.

Russia, by calling itself three nations, because of three divisions, succeeded in getting three United Nations votes. On that basis, the United States should have 50 votes -one for each of the states in the union. Every tiny African country, including those which are still undergoing the birth pains of independence, has the same voting power as the United States-one vote, that is.

Carrying it still further, if we count the benefits the United States has received, they would amount to far less than one per cent, with the Soviet Union obtaining about 50 per cent, even though it won't pay its war-assessment dues, and with the scarcely-civilized African countries getting about 40 per cent of the benefits accruing from the United Nations if, in fact, there are any benefits.

And that is not the whole of it. Elected not long ago as president of the United Nation's General Assembly is Quaison-Sackey-the-Lion. In this position of "president of the world," this Negro from Ghana has power over the lives of American citizens in direct proportion to the surrender of American sovereignty to the United Nations.

Under treaty law, Americans are obligated to accept political and cultural edicts of the United Nations even when such edicts violate constitutional guarantees.

Under these conditions, we find some of our highest national officials recommending that the United States turn its military forces over to the United Nations - a suicidal proposal if there ever was

In political matters Quaison-Sackey leans toward Russia. In cultural matters he leans toward the jungle. If we turn the United States over to the United Nations we turn it over to an African jungle lord who now owes his allegiance principally to Soviet Russia, the communist nation who principles and aggressions the United States officials have purported to oppose ever since the end of World War

There are more than 100 countries which have membership in the United Nations. Russia has a population far larger than that of the United States. Many of the other countries that are members, including France and England, have large populations. No one whose mind contained an ounce of logic could see why the United States should pay 40 per cent of the total cost of running the United Nations.

Santa Claus" is appropriate.

have their hands out for the billions of dollars American taxpayers are forced to donate to them, there is nothing but scorn. Both Gamel Nasser, head man of Egypt and President of the United Arab Republic, and President Sukarno of Indonesia have told the United States to "go to hell," but we are still pouring millions in foreign aid into those countries, as we are into most of the other countries in the United Nations, including those which are communist.

Everybody Out Of Step

is that Sweden, beginning September 3, 1967, will decree that drivers must travel on the right side of the road, instead of on the left. This, in England's view, will put one deal of money, time and effort to get ready for the switch. Many street and road signs will have to be changed, a good deal of engineering work will be required and automobile steering wheels will need to be switched from the right to the left side. The shift will cost some $80 million.

Back in the horse and buggy days, it was important that the driver sit on the right side of the vehicle. One of the principal speedinducers in those days was the whip. Since most people are righthanded, it was better for the driver to sit on the right side so he would not endanger the other occupant of the front seat when he swung the lash. Also, he was less likely to strike occupants of other vehicles if he swung toward the outside of the road.

With the advent of automobiles, there was no need to swing a whip but it became important that the

Announcement from Stockholm driver sit on the side of the car next to the traffic coming from the other direction, so he would be able to see how close he was being shaved when the other cars went > vantage point for the driver, Americans and people of a good many other countries shifted the steering wheel to the left side of the car. In England and a number of other countries, the steering wheel was left on the right side but people began driving on the left side so the driver would be closer to the opposing traffic.

> When Sweden begins to drive on the right side it will leave only England, Ireland, Malta and Iceland driving on the left side among the European countries. One or more might change before Sweden does but it is not likely.

> Presumably the English Blue Book for Motorists, with its customary consummate ego, will then declare:

> land people drive on the wrong side of the road."

Future Tree Supply

Every kind of farming has its own particular problems and peculiarities. And one kind is completely unique, because of the length of time that must go by before the crop is ready for market.

Louisiana, with its many paper mills, sawmills and wood-working mills, is one of the states in which tree farming is of vital importance

Tree farming is a program of comparatively recent origin designed to assure that this country will never run out of the trees that are the source of thousands of products, many not recognizable as coming from wood at all, which are in common use in this country.

Tree farming has become a major undertaking. More than 27,000 of these farmers are growing timber as a crop on some 64 million acres of privately - owned, taxpaying land. They must be enormously patient and far - seeing, as well as industrious. During the growth cycle, the trees must be protected against fire, insects and disease. Access roads must be built. Storms and winds can make trouble on a big scale. Costs are heavy and continuous. And 20, 50 or even more years must pass before the young tree is mature enough for commercial harvesting. The stately Douglas fir, for instance, must be given up to 80 years of growth to reach sawlog size.

The tree farmer, clearly, must see inducements if he is to stay in business. The most important of all is a favorable tax climate which recognizes his unique situation.

As long as the United States continues to act in the way it does toward the United Nations and in foreign aid, news commentators are justified in calling this country "Uncle Sucker." It has long ago passed the stage at which "Uncle THRIVES ON ONIONS This is in reply to Mr. O., of Chicago who wrote recently that people should steer clear of raw onions. He wrote: "You never see a worm in a raw onion. Even worms know what's bad for them.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Mr. O. is so right. We never see worms, flies or other pests in or on onions, thus no need to spray them with D.D.T., etc., and for your information, Mr. O., all raw onions, but especially the green stems which most people discard, are the best brooms which sweep away all kinds of Red China's other air strength definitely indicates readiness to intervene. Regular North Viet Nam ground forces, up to regimental units, are positively known to be in South Viet Nam. In recent weeks, these North Viet Nam troops have been increasingly used in combat.

They carried the brunt of the fighting at Bingh Gia, where the South Vietnamese and U.S. advisers suffered their biggest losses to date

In the opinion of these intelligence experts, the next likely move will be Peking's use of its jet fighters to provide the North Viet Nam regulars with air support - which the Communists have totally lacked in this struggle so far.

This dire development would immediately confront the U.S. with decisions of supremest im-

President Johnson would have to decide how far he is prepared to go to make good the ringing pronouncement in his State of the Union message Monday night of this week.

"Twice in one generation we have had to fight against aggression in the Far East. To ignore aggression would only increase the danger of a larger war. What is at stake (in South Viet Nam) is the cause of freedom. In that cause we shall never be found wanting.

WHERE THEY GET THEM The jolting discovery that Red China has acquired Mig-21s has caused deep perturbation in State Department and Central Intelligence Agency quarters.

Both have policy papers as serting (1) Russia halted all military aid to Peking in 1961 when the long-smoldering ideological feud broke into the open; (2) no Mig-21s have ever been supplied the Chinese; (3) the latter's airforce has deteriorat ed in the last few years.

Since the appearance of Chinese-piloted Mig-21s in the inflamed Viet Nam area, debate has raged among administration policy-makers over their origin.

State Department and CIA officials are inclined to the view that these latest-model jet fighters are being produced in China. Military experts sharply question this theory. In refutation they cite the following two significant factors: (1) There is no "firm" information or evidence that Red China has plants capable of manufacturing Mig-21s. (2) Principal sources of the reports that these combat planes are being made in China are Hong Kong and New Delhi, where Communist agents are notor-The skeptical military officials also content the reports of the Mig-21s' being produced in China were "leaked" by Communist sources, and so timed as to coincide with the appearance of these planes in the South Viet Nam region Prior to the sighting of the Mig-21s, the jet fighter strength of Red China was calculated by the CIA as between 1,750 and 2,000 planes, including approximately 100 Migs-19s. The others were Mig-17s and Mig-15s, now rated as obsolescent

WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY, JR. Johnson Applause Called Too Great

WAS IT MY imagination, or to graduate to the Royal We, as was the Congress that listened to it is traditionally called. Now the President deliver his State of the Union message unusually sycophantic? I mean, the business of interrupting every single phrase with a burst of applause - whose timbre was that of the school boy laughter after every single joke of the headmaster. The President said a few, not many, inspiring things (the people will make the country great, not the government); one or two moving things (how the area he came from had been transferred from caliche - his word, friends; don't blame this one on me country into luxuriant farm and pastures); a great many things meaningless (he wants an immigration law "based on the work a man can do," whatever that means); and mischievous (he wants to repeal the authority of the individual states to legislate right to work laws). The program, by and large, is a medley of evasion (he wants to stop Communism by appearing on Russian TV - he would be more likely to stop whatever is left of the Resistance Movement): dogged welfarism (medicare, more minimum wages, etc.), and government culture - climbing (he wants to landscape our cities). There were no particular surprises, as I say: one might have predicted just about everything he said, save possibly the news of the flowering of the banks of the Pedernales. Which is why it may make sense to meditate for the moment less on the State of the Union, as transcribed by Mr. Johnson, than on the style of the man who delivered the message, and of the Congress that listened to it

A LITTLE THING perhaps. But have you noticed how people, as they become important, have difficulty deciding which of the personal pronouns is most appropriate to their use? You and I, referring to ourselves and our endeavors, say "I": as in "I will do what I can to help the The minute one goes public, the temptation is tend to do better this year.

the use of "we" is common to bashful folk who fear that otherwise they will give the impression that they are taking personal credit where credit is in fact owing to their entire entourage. Thus a senator who may be the soul of self-deprecation may say, "We are going to do everything we can to help the Red Cross," by which he means he, his administrative assistants, his uncles and aunts friends and votaries, will jointly do what they can for the Red Cross. Where you need to watch it is when you find the politician so given to thinking of himself as a collectivity that he will write in his dairy, "At 8 A.M., we got up and took a shower." When that happens. he has elided from modesty to the royal usage, and has got to thinking of himself as augustly elevated from mere singularity to the class of Queen Victoria 'We are not amused," she snapped to the gentleman who told the off-color joke), or the Pope ("We bestow our blessings," etc.). BUT THERE IS a point of self-absorption that goes even bevond the "we." It is, of course, the return under exalted auspices, to the old-time "I." One can become so taken by one's own importance, that what matters now is to stress precisely the singularity, rather than the collectivity. President Johnson arrived at this point the other night. "Wherever waste is found I will eliminate it," claimed. In fact, he cannot mean that he will eliminate it. unless he means he will buzz about Washington offices personally retrieving useable paper clips from bureaucratic wastebaskets. He means: "we - the members of the Johnson Administration, their subordinates. and their subordinates' subordinates, will eliminate the waste. The Administration made progress against waste last year, he said - but "I in

36th President's Burdens Immense

of the burden which the 36th President of the United States must carry, one might compare it with that of the President inaugurated 40 years ago, Calvin Coolidge, who had also except general understandings come into the chief magistracy with the British Empire and its through the death of his predecessor, Warren G. Harding.

Coolidge had been elected almost as easily as was Lyndon B. Johnson, chiefly because the Democrats had no compelling issue against him and the country was experiencing its first great swell of general prosperity since World War I. The task which confronted this Massachusetts Republican however as compared to that which President Johnson now faces, was like contrasting the mayoralty of a middle size Massachusetts town, such as Coolidge's own Northampton, with that of New York City.

Coolidge had no serious foreign problems, and he recognized no labor problems, no farm problems and certainly no welfare problems, though all existed and eventually would wind up on the doorstep of the White House.

ABOUT ALL THE 30th President was able to originate was that the two hour nap after lunch, to which he religiously adhered. But he was an extremely popular president, and could probably have been reelected had he chosen to run. which he did not

The only reason for these recollections is that they mirror the vast change in the destinies of the U.S. which have expanded more in the past 40 years than in the preceding century. So many changes have occurred that it is doubtful whether Calvin Coolidge, with his simple but effective theories of government could have faced up to the problems confronting the current president.

This is not to say that Lyndon B. Johnson is a superman, but he is a product of his generation, which means that he has been trained in a much different school of government than Calvin Coolidge, and under different teachers.

The tremendous develop and expansion of the United States in 40 years are well known to everyone familiar with contemporary history, The last national presidential campaign, however, brought to Washington reports of an uneasy feeling about the country's future, arising from fear of over-expansion on the one hand and feeling on the other that Senator Barry Goldwater's warnings of moral corruption and expanding federal controls might be borne out in the next

ANOTHER 40 YEARS contrast, moreover, may have a significant bearing on America's future than the comparison of the country's economic stature then and now. That is between our foreign pol-

Then a distinct minority, largely cherishing the memory of Woodrow Wilson and convinced that the U.S. had made a mistake in rejecting membership in the League of Nations, made little impression on the country's thinking. Now the U.S. finds itself enmeshed in world affairs, in which it became involved to bring some order out of the chaos which followed World

Unquestionably the U.S. can claim credit for saving the civilized world from the constant devastation which followed every European war of the 18th century and which was visited upon the Southern States after the Civil War of the 19th century.

NEVERTHELESS, it is the ever growing determination of other nations, including almost all of those which the United States has been bent on aiding and returning to normal existence, to remain free of our influence, which now confronts President Johnson with the most complex world situation since World War II. Calvin Coolidge's policy in foreign affairs was one of wary avoidance. Lyndon Johnson cannot follow that policy, but his political shrewdness has been compared to that of Coolidge in being able to keep out of trouble. Coolidge's Secretary of State was Frank B. Kellogg a conservative Minnesota lawyer, who earned the sobriquet of "Nervous Nellie" feared becoming involved too deeply in world problems. Johnson's Secretary of State Dean Rusk, speaks for his chief in moving cautiously, but he, like the President faces far greater problems in the foreign fields, some of which may result in serious reversals for the administration.

Wage-Hour Suit Filed Against Bastrop Firm

SHREVEPORT (Special) The U. S. Department of Labor has filed a wage-hour suit against Percy Moss Lumber Co., Inc. of Bastrop.

The suit is on record in U. S District Court here.

The lumber company the complaint by Labor Secretary Willard Wirtz alleges, has violated the minimum wage, overtime pay record-keeping and shipping provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Wirtz seeks to enjoin the corporation from such future violations and has asked the court to grant an order restraining the firm from shipping in commerce any goods produced in violation of the act.

The complaint also alleges that $8,034.44 in back pay is due 14 workers who were not properly compensated for overtime hours.

It also contends that 11 of these employes were paid hourly rates below the legal minimum established by the Federal Wage-Hour law.

The plaintiff asks that the court order also enjoin the company from withholding the amount of back wages determined to be due its employes.

Medical Challenge Center

Anne Adams

HOUSTON (UPI) - A mile or so from downtown Houston lies a city-within-a-city where a person can have his heart patched, borrow a kidney, or add some life-saving dacron to his vascular system.

It is the Texas Medical Center and in its operating theaters work some of the world's top surgeons. Students learning their techniques watch through protective plastic - observation domes and crowd the classes of Baylor University College of Medicine, the main academic arm of the center.

The center spread a $125-mil-lion array of buildings across 134 acres of what was once a splash of woods through Houston's southwest quarter. But the story of a medical center is not told so much by its impressive physical plant as by the men who work the medical marvels within it.

Three Charged Money 'Rains' With Attempted For 5-Year-Old Armed Robbery Bastrop Girl

BASTROP (Special) - It rained money in Bastrop Friday. At least that's the story Joan Jordan of Bastrop told her mother. While on a downtown shopping trip Friday, little five-year-old Joan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerald Jordan, dashed inside a men's clothing store with a handful of money and shouted, "Mommie, it's raining mon-

An effort was made to locate the owner since it was assumed that Joan's story was not "exactly true." She described the money loser as a big man with big pants which had paint on them.

Further investigation revealed that a man fitting this description, H. D. Carter, a local painter, had been in a paint store nearby and had received change for $20.

Carter returned to the paint store after going to a bank to make a deposit and realizing he did not have the correct amount.
